More to Mexico migrant deal, Trump says, waves document

The U.S. wants Mexico to be declared a safe third country.

President Donald Trump on Tuesday insisted there was more to the migrant deal with Mexico announced over the weekend, even after Mexican officials unveiled new details of the agreement, and waved around a document that he said proved his point.

Trump did not show the document or give any details, but a Reuters photograph of the folded document allowed reporters to read parts of it.

The U.S.-Mexico migration deal includes a regional asylum plan and Mexico's commitment to examine and potentially change its laws to implement the agreement, according to the copy.

The deal lays out "a regional approach to burden-sharing in relation to the processing of refugee status claims to migrants," the document said.

Trump told reporters he would let Mexico announce it "at the right time," but that "it goes into effect at my option."

On Monday, Trump said Mexico would soon disclose part of the agreement and said that portion would have to be taken up by the Mexican Congress. He gave no more details.

Announcing previously undisclosed details of Friday's deal, Mexican officials said on Monday they had 45 days to show that increased enforcement efforts were effective in reducing flows of migrants, mostly from Central America. If not, they would have to talk with the United States about additional measures.

The United States wants Mexico to be declared a safe third country in which asylum seekers would have to seek safe harbor instead of the United States, a demand Mexico has long rejected.

Mexican Foreign Minister Marcelo Ebrard dropped his previous opposition to that idea in comments on Monday, but said other Latin American countries should share the asylum load with Mexico under such an arrangement.

The deal struck on Friday averted import tariffs on all Mexican goods, which Trump had vowed to impose this week unless Mexico did more to curb migration.

At the White House on Tuesday, Trump praised the agreement and called on congressional Democrats, who control the U.S. House of Representatives, to also help address the waves of migrants seeking to cross the southern U.S. border with Mexico.

"We're going to sit down at some point with the Democrats, we're going to work it all out," he told reporters.

Democrats, along with some of Trump's fellow Republicans, have criticized Trump for tying trade policy to the immigration debate. They have also blasted the Trump administration's handling of the migrants, calling it a humanitarian disaster. REUTERS

Trump receives 'beautiful' letter from Kim Jong Un

2 President Donald Trump cozied up anew to North Korean leader Kim Jong Un on Tuesday, praising a "beautiful" letter he received from Kim and appearing to take a public stance against the CIA spying on him. Trump told reporters at the White House, "I think that something will happen that's going to be very positive," but gave no details. Washington is seeking to rebuild momentum in stalled talks with Pyongyang, aimed at getting North Korea to dismantle its nuclear weapons program. Trump and Kim last met early this year in Hanoi but failed to reach a denuclearization agreement. Trump spoke a day after the Wall Street Journal reported that Kim's slain half-brother, Kim Jong Nam, was a source for the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency. Kim Jong Nam was killed at the airport in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, in 2017. REUTERS

Amazon to shut restaurant delivery service in US

3 Amazon.com said on Tuesday it would end its U.S. restaurant food delivery service on June 24, giving in to intense competition from GrubHub Inc., DoorDash and Uber Technologies' Uber Eats services. "A small fraction of Amazon employees are affected by this decision, and many of those affected have already found new roles at Amazon," the company said in a statement. "Employees will be offered personalized support to find a new role within, or outside of, the company." Amazon Restaurants was launched in 2015 in Seattle and was designed to give Prime members a way to order meals, apart from products and groceries, through the online retailer. The service was expanded to more than 20 U.S. cities and then to London, where the program ended in November. Shares of Amazon edged up 0.4 percent, while GrubHub rose 8.6 percent. REUTERS

Beyond Meat slides after stock gets downgraded

4 Shares of Beyond Meat Inc. fell as much as 22 percent on Tuesday after one of the stock's lead underwriters, J.P. Morgan, downgraded it, saying the exponential growth expected from the plant-based burger was now priced in. Beyond Meat has surged over 69 percent in two days since it forecast overall sales in 2019 to more than double. J.P. Morgan analyst Ken Goldman cut the stock rating to "neutral" from "overweight" and said it was "purely a valuation call." The stock, which has quadrupled in value since its debut in May, is "beyond our price target," he said. Shares of the company were down 19.8 percent at $134.9 in mid-day trading, but still well above Wall Street analysts' price target on the stock. Goldman raised price target for the second time in three days to $121, after raising it by $23 last Friday on the upbeat forecast. REUTERS

MBTA launches probe of train derailments

A Red Line train derailed Tuesday, days after a Green Line derailment.

The MBTA will reach out to a third party to examine train derailments that have occurred over the past two years.

MBTA GM Steve Poflak announced the plans during a press conference near the JFK-UMass Red Line station where a train derailed early Tuesday morning.

"I want a fresh set of eyes on this to make sure we're not missing something," said Poflak, who added that he believes the train system is "safe" and that he uses it every day.

Poflak said shuttle bus service was planned along the Red Line for the Tuesday afternoon and evening commute, with some additional commuter rail service to the South Shore from South Station.

Traffic problems in the derailment area are anticipated because cranes will be required to help re-rail the train. The derailed train is located near a bridge, which will complicate efforts to restore service on the heavily-used line.

Signal equipment was also damaged, said Poflak, who estimated the derailed train would be removed within 24 hours.

Tuesday's derailment is not related to Saturday's Green Line derailment, according to Poflak, who said there have been four derailments on the system this year.

"We hear very clearly and we understand very clearly that the situation with these derailments is not acceptable and we are taking steps to address that," he said.

Poflak did not have an estimate of the number of derailments over the past two years.

After Tuesday's derailment, frustrated strap-hangers vented their annoyance on Twitter, with some sharing photos of displaced commuters huddled under umbrellas.

"Saying 'seek alternate transportation' to your customers is so unfair. This is YOUR problem so YOU should provide alternate transportation. You are a transportation company after all, right?!" tweeted @leannalee771.

Big Papi awake in Boston after surgery for Dominican shooting

David Ortiz, the retired baseball star who played for the Boston Red Sox, was awake and stable after undergoing surgery in Boston on Monday night for wounds suffered when he was shot in the Dominican Republic, his wife said on Tuesday.

"He is stable, awake, and resting comfortably this morning," Tiffany Ortiz said in a statement released by the Red Sox. He was expected to remain in the intensive care unit at Massachusetts General Hospital for the next few days, she said.

Ortiz, 43, was shot in the torso on Sunday evening at a nightclub in Santo Domingo, the capital of his native Dominican Republic. His friend Jhoel López, a television host, was also wounded in the shooting.

Police there have arrested one suspect, identified as Eddy Vladimir Félix García, who was beaten by bystanders at the scene. They said on Monday they were still searching for a second suspect who fled on foot.

Ortiz underwent a first round of surgery in Santo Domingo on Sunday night before being flown to Boston.

Known as "Big Papi," Ortiz is still a hero in Boston for his role in three World Series championships and for his motivational remarks in the days after the 2013 Boston Marathon bombing.

LIFESTYLE

We took the time to unpack the newest — and weak — installment of the once-chilling and -vital satire.

JAMES CASE
letters@metro.us

"Black Mirror" has long faced comparisons to the seminal show "The Twilight Zone." Both are anthologies focused on twisty and unexpected plots. In many ways, it's unfair to compare "Black Mirror" to "The Twilight Zone"; instead, it's accurate to see "Black Mirror" as the spiritual descendant.

However, as initial episodes showed great narrative promise, further episodes exposed repetitive, paper-thin plots and hammy dialogue. Applying an overlay of "technology is bad," it turns out, doesn't make for compelling television. Just because a writer has a perspective doesn't mean the writer has any insight. "The Twilight Zone" churned out 154 episodes in its initial run. "Black Mirror" has churned out 24 narratives and it's clearly pretty well out of ideas.

It's not that the three stories aren't interesting concepts in their own right. It's that none of them really seem to know what they're doing and why they exist. It's as though they've (for the most part) tossed out the technology-is-bad rule on the whiteboard and changed it to "technology is ?" and left it at that.

The first episode, "Striking Vipers," explores the source of passion for two men who are living "very different lives" because one has a family and one is single — somehow, there's an unreachable cultural chasm. And while there are genuinely touching moments, and considerate ruminations on the benefits of transhumanist concerns, there's also a generous tone of homophobia excused as a character arc. It's basically a riff on the sentimentality the show created in the past episode, "San Junipero," and hopes to capture that same feeling. It's not a bad thing. It just feels familiar.

The tricky thing is that every adult in the world right now is well-aware of the negative side effects of technology on our cultural landscape. Finding an insightful point of view while crafting a good story is something difficult to pull off. The second episode, "Smithereens," is a promising premise that is impressive in how quickly it finds itself to be incredibly dull.

Is it a suspense thriller? It finds a way to be suspenseless. Is it a critique of tech giants and their aim to be omnipresent in our lives? That's a facile theme that the show has run into the ground and we won't stay with that too long. Is it a rumination on addiction? Kind of? Is it about free will? That seems like a pretty loaded topic, so we'll skirt that one — we've only got an hour here. Is it that social media now acts as our collective memory? I think so, but nobody really seems to think about anything long enough to know, so it's better if we just move on, which seems to be the point.

There's a decent adage that all forms of technology can ultimately be utilized as a tool or toy. Their design may be neutral, but how we choose to use them can either be in the aim of "production" or the aim of "entertainment." And it works best when it serves up a cautionary tale of when technology or our utilization goes too far on either end of that spectrum. The problem is that all of these episodes are stuck in neutral.

It's acceptable for a show like "Black Mirror" to be implausible or to ask you to really use your willful suspension of disbelief, but the degree to which the third episode, "Rachel, Jack and Ashley Too," asks us to go without much of any return is a bit of a violation of the audience's viewing compact. This one is plagued with the same identity problems as the second one but with an even more painful third act. This fatuous exercise finds a way to want to be a teen movie, buddy-cop movie, an extended princess-in-the-tower trope, and a family drama. Also, one of the characters' minds has been replicated inside of a miniature robot, which, I guess it's funny to see a little robot casually swear if you're using your imagination for the first time. There's a moment at the end when the pop princess has gone punk, and we have a painful visit to what an actual living, breathing adult thinks a "rock show" is like in 2019. It's hard not to hide or run out of the room. In a knife twist, the little robot is now "punk AF," and literally has a little anarchy symbol stuck onto its chest.

This nod to co-opted culture is perfectly symptomatic of what "Black Mirror" is in 2019: narratively co-opted, pandering to its audience without realizing that it's entirely out of touch. What was once a challenging and interesting friend is now the person at the bar who can't stop saying embarrassing things, and has too much time on their hands and doesn't use it wisely.

A true icon

Ed Asner

GETTY IMAGES

The documentary "Ed Asner: On Stage and Off" follows the life of the actor and activist.

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

Ed Asner is truly iconic. People from every generation know him, whether it's as cranky newsman Lou Grant on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" or the voice of a grieving widower in Pixar's "Up."

Asner is not only a respected actor, he is also an activist, who at one point was the President of the Screen Actors Guild. He has made his mark not only on the screen and the stage, but also in people's hearts through his wit, charm and big heart.

The 89-year-old has made such a mark that the documentary "Ed Asner: On Stage and Off" highlights his life as a whole, not just as a "star." Bostonians can get an in-person glimpse of Asner June 18 (7:30 p.m.) at the Regent Theatre, when Asner hosts a screening of the documentary and a Q&A after. Asner sat down with Metro to discuss the new documentary, his favorite roles and his activism.

How did you feel after you learned there was going to be a documentary made about your life?

I was not involved with the production, but I was honored when I found out the documentary was being made. I hope it sells tickets. I don't think I knew right away that it was going to be made, I've had several [documentaries].

What does the film cover? Your career, life, or a little bit of everything?

It goes into my radical roots and my passion for causes, really the whole nine yards. I'm quite pleased by its coverage [of my life] during that time. After I watched the film, I blushed.

Now jumping to your career, were there any roles that stuck out to you as your favorite?

Certainly, all are very memorable [for me] but there's Lou Grant from "The Mary Tyler Moore Show." I loved doing that character. I was proud to make it my own, and I was thrilled to have done it. There were short-lived efforts with others that [were also] worth doing. They've all been a narrow road traveled, the characters are much alike and they had the same attitude. I never felt I made a mistake in choice, maybe in other things, but never in choice.

I know you were involved with speaking your mind about causes and politics, do you think that acting gave you that platform and that voice to have your opinions heard?

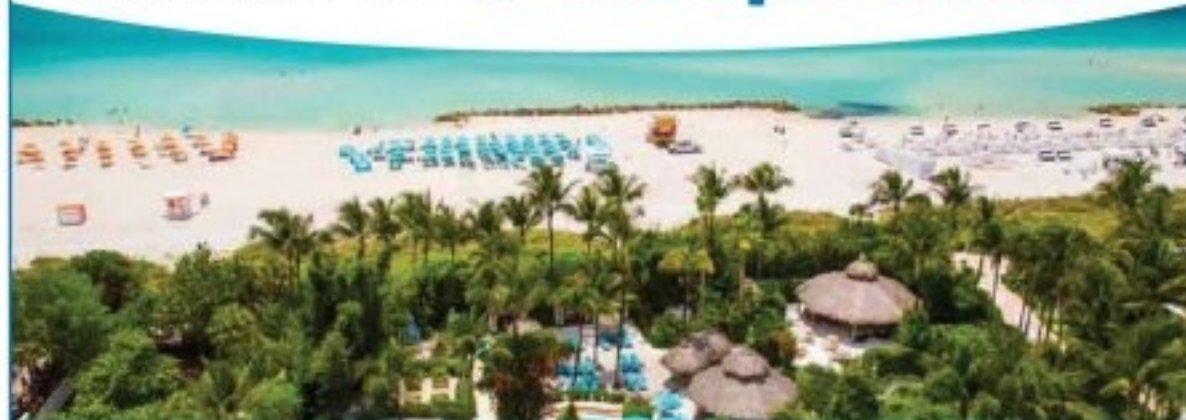

Oh sure, I was always known as an activist in the business. I didn't have to sell my political credentials. I was a union man and I believed the union there is "sanct."

Overall what can people expect from your documentary and event?

It's a complete documentary, and I will stand and die with it.

SPORTS

Game 7 at the Garden tonight, with the Cup on the line.

MATT BURKE
matthew.burke@metro.us

After 252 days, 82 regular season games, and 23 energy-depleting playoff games, the 2018-19 Boston Bruins will conclude their season tonight in Boston (8 p.m., NBC).

They will either win the most prestigious prize in pro sports, or they will watch another team from another city raise Lord Stanley's Cup on the Garden ice for the second time in seven years.

For as great as this run in Boston sports has been this century, winning titles in front of the hometown crowd has been relatively rare. Of the 12 championships won by Boston teams since 2002, only two titles have been clinched in the city of Boston (2008 Celtics and 2013 Red Sox).

Lifting the Cup toward the heavens while 17,000 of your hometown fans have an out-of-body experience has to be the most exhilarating feeling you can have as an athlete. And there's a solid chance this could happen for Tuukka Rask, Patrice Bergeron, Zdeno Chara, Brad Marchand and the gang this evening.

David Krejci and the Bruins need just one more victory to capture the Stanley Cup.

Win or lose tonight, Rask is likely to be named the Conn Smythe trophy recipient, which is given to the Most Valuable Player from the Stanley Cup playoffs. He's been that good over these past two months.

The trophy has been given to a player that lost in the Cup Final five times, most recently to Jean-Sebastien Giguere of the Anaheim Ducks in 2003.

Worlds more important than the Conn Smythe is — of course — obtaining the Cup tonight. The Bruins will be asking a lot of Rask to shut down an opponent one last time, but at this point Herculean efforts by the B's netminder have come to be expected.

Rask hasn't allowed more than three goals in a game since Game 4 of the first round against Toronto. In the Cup Final, he's been at his best as here are his goals allowed for each game in the series thus far.

Game 1: 2
Game 2: 3
Game 3: 2
Game 4: 3
Game 5: 2
Game 6: 1

Perhaps the most remarkable Rask numbers of all this postseason concern what he has done in games in which the Bruins can clinch a series. In Game 7 of the first round against the Maple Leafs, Rask made 32 saves and allowed just one goal in a 5-1 Boston win.

In Game 6 of the semifinals against Columbus, Rask made 39 stops and shutout the Blue Jackets in a 3-0 Bruins victory.

In the last round against Carolina (which seems like it took place six months ago, by the way), Rask again pitched a shutout in the clincher. In Game 4 on the road, Rask stopped 24 shots en route to a 4-0 B's win.

The problem for the Bruins this time, however, is that Blues goaltender Jordan Binnington has been nearly as impressive as Rask this entire postseason. He also has been responding extremely well to poor outings in the Game 7 facts

Tonight's game will be the 17th Game 7 in the history of the Stanley Cup Final.

It is the first Stanley Cup Final Game 7 since the Bruins beat the Vancouver Canucks on the road in 2011.

It will be the first time Boston has hosted Game 7 of one of the four major sports since Game 7 of the 1984 NBA Finals between the Celtics and Lakers.

This will be the 14th Stanley Cup playoffs Game 7 that Zdeno Chara has played in during his illustrious career, a new NHL record.

There have been five games this postseason in which Binnington has given up four goals or more. In the next games following those clunkers, Binnington has allowed two goals or less in each of them.

The Bruins hung four goals on Binnington in Game 6 in St. Louis, so the good money says that the 25-year-old rookie will respond well tonight.

Ticket prices

Good seats are still available ... if you're willing to pay the equivalent of your rich uncle's monthly mortgage.

The average Game 7 ticket being sold on the secondary market as of Tuesday afternoon was just north of $3,000.

Here were what some of the good seats for Game 7 were going for on Tuesday at StubHub:

Loge Glass 11: $14,375
Loge Glass 11: 11,244
Loge Glass 6: 10,450

Watch party

If you don't have that type of disposable income, there is an option to watch the B's in a large gathering among other fans. Game 7 will stream live inside the Bruins' practice facility at Warrior Ice Arena. The watch party is free to attend and seats are available on a first-come, first serve basis.

Warrior Ice Arena is located in Brighton at 90 Guest Street.

Tuukka Rask has been in the zone for the better part of two months.

Nothing more exciting than Game 7 of a championship series. Wednesday night, the Blues will battle the Bruins for hockey's coveted Stanley Cup (NBC, 8 p.m.).

It has been an enjoyable series thus far for fans and bettors. Investors fond of the "zig-zag" approach are particularly happy, posting a 4-1 record by simply betting on the team that lost the prior outing.

That would point to St. Louis bouncing back off a home loss in Game

6 Sunday. Betting markets aren't yet respecting that angle. Boston has been laying in the vicinity of -170 on the moneyline (risk $170 to win $100, or anything in that ratio) at William Hill and many other sports books since late Sunday. At that price, the standard return is +150 on St. Louis (risk $100 to win $150, etc.).

The case for Boston to claim the Cup:

"Boston's victories have been much more impressive. Final scores have been 4-2, 7-2, and 5-1, for a 16-5 total. St. Louis had to go overtime in its first win, a 3-2 nail biter, before winning by 4-2 and 2-1 tallies. That's only a combined 9-5 edge for the Blues (8-5 in regulation).

"Boston's playing much better defense (including goaltending as part of the defensive scheme), allowing 2-2-2-4-2-1 in regulation in this series. The Blues have only topped two goals in regulation once in six tries! Defensively, St. Louis has shown more vulnerability...allowing 4-2-7-2-1-5.

"Boston's slightly more likely to earn power plays, and much more likely to convert them. The Bruins are 7/21 for a 33% conversion rate. St. Louis is a horrendous 1/18 for just 6%. It's as if St. Louis doesn't even have a power play.

The case for St. Louis as a live dog:

"Home ice hasn't meant much of anything in this series. Visitors actually have a 4-2 record. Clearly, the high market moneyline is giving Boston a price boost for playing at home. Might not be justified in this intense matchup.

"St. Louis is in a bounce back spot, where it's thrived since getting its act together a few months ago. The Blues are a perfect 2-0 after prior losses in this series, and have won their last five playoff games in this situation. Drifting back into the regular season, St. Louis is now 16-5 in its last 21 immediately after a loss.

Aries The past can offer insight into an emotional situation. Listen to what others have to say, but don't follow the crowd if they are heading in a direction that doesn't suit you.

Taurus Take a look at what's available. A change of location, lifestyle upgrade or educational opportunity is favored. Do your best to keep up with industry and technology changes.

Gemini Trust will be an issue. Offers that sound too good to be true should be ruled out. A slow build and hard work will help you excel. Leave nothing to chance.

Cancer Look at your choices and consider trying something you've never done before. Test the water to gain experience and insight. Trust your instincts and follow through.

Leo Think twice before you make a move. Concentrate on how to best take advantage of your assets, skills and connections. Planning ahead is in your best interest.

Virgo If you get involved in group endeavors, it will change the way you think about domestic and professional situations you face. Look at your options and proceed.

Libra Do something for yourself. Getting a makeover, planning a trip or signing up for something that will help you develop new skills is favored. Romance is on the rise.

Scorpio Participate in events that will help you gain experience. Share your thoughts and collaborate with people you find stimulating. Embrace new beginnings.

Sagittarius Don't lose sight of what's essential and what needs to be taken care of immediately. If you rely on someone else to handle your affairs or responsibilities, you'll be disappointed.

Capricorn Rely on your abilities to remain calm and to avoid being talked into something before you review certain facts and figures. The best help you can offer is an honest opinion.

Aquarius Updates at home will turn out well and should help to lower your overhead. A significant relationship will take a positive turn if you share the work and enjoy the results together.

Pisces Get involved in projects that make you think and that require your creative input. You'll accomplish a lot if you work with people who are practical as well as dedicated. EUGENIA LAST
